JUST A WORD.

In the midst of life's reverses,
When thy pathway all seems dark,
Black as midnight, unillumined
E'en by pleasure's faintest spark;

When deep gloom and sad foreboding
Cradles thee within its arms,
And thy soul is filled with broodings
Working ill like evil charms;

When thy labor all seems useless,
And existence one great pain,
Joy and hope are fled forever
And to struggle on seems vain,

Do some tender deed of mercy
To a soul with sorrow racked,
Give the balm of loving kindness
In some helpful little act.

That one deed thy soul will lighten,
And its heavy gloom will lift,
As a ray of brilliant sunshine
Through the blackest clouds may drift.

MR. HURD'S HOLIDAY.

"No business tomorrow, my dear," Mr. Hurd announced cheerfully to his better half as he stepped into the sitting room and deposited several brown paper bundles upon one of the chairs.

"Why, to be sure," she responded, brightening up. "I had almost forgotten that it will be a holiday. What are you going to do to celebrate? I suppose that we might all go off somewhere for the day," she concluded thoughtfully.

Mr. Hurd shook his head. "There are a number of things about the house which I am intending to look into tomorrow; it is only a few days ago that you were complaining that I was not more domestic, so now I am going to turn over a new leaf. I have come to the conclusion that we are constantly paying out money to incompetent workmen for little odd jobs that I could just as well do myself. Any man with brains and the proper tools can turn off a good many dollars' worth of work in his spare moments," he went on as he removed the paper wrappers from the several bundles.

"Are you sure that you are feeling as well as usual, Theodore?" his wife inquired, watching him in anxious astonishment while she recalled her many fruitless efforts in the past to awaken in him a desire to help about some slight household detail which needed attention.

"Never better, my dear," he answered, unrolling a bottle of glue and setting it upon the mantelpiece. "Why do you ask?"

"Well, you see, Theodore, it is such a new departure for you that—I—couldn't help wondering if"——

"Well, if what?"

"If anything were the matter—if you were quite yourself. You're not feverish, are you, Theodore?" she concluded, running her fingers over his forehead.

Mr. Hurd smiled benignly as he produced a small can of paint and a brush, which he sat down next to the glue. "I'll tell you just how it happened, my dear," he said. "On my way down town I overtook Lovering, and as we walked along together I asked him casually how he was going to spend tomorrow. 'As I usually spend my holidays,' he replied, 'in repairing and tinkering up things about the house and doing my best to freeze out the carpenter and the plumber, besides sorting over old papers and putting things to rights that I seldom have a chance at.' After I left him I began to think how many holidays I had wasted when I might have been really accomplishing something and have had money in my pocket to boot.

"I have reformed, my dear," he concluded, opening the last of the paper bundles, "as you will see tomorrow. Here are half a dozen new tools which I find I need if I am to do anything of the sort really well. Isn't that a nice little hammer? And you remember that we hadn't any chisel or screwdriver that a man could properly work with."

Mrs. Hurd gazed at her husband, while tears rose to her eyes. Theodore," she said huskily, "you have realized one of my dearest hopes. With all your faults, you have always been far ahead of other men, and now—now I am almost afraid you are too perfect. You're sure that you do feel quite well and haven't any sharp pain darting through your chest?"

The following morning Mr. Hurd began to carry out his good resolutions immediately after breakfast, and when the younger children urged him to go for a walk he informed them that "father had some very important work to do, but that they might watch him if they liked."

Mrs. Hurd met him soon afterward mounting the attic stairs, followed by a procession of willing helpers. "Where are you going, Theodore?" she inquired.

"It is a long time since we had the tank cleaned out," he responded, "and I see no need of paying an incompetent and expensive plumber, who brings another man to stand around and look at him, for doing a simple thing like that."

"Very well, dear," his wife said encouragingly, "only are you sure that you understand all about it?"

"Of course I do," he replied a trifle indignantly, and Mrs. Hurd, realizing that she ought to have more confidence in him than to suggest such a possibility, retired meekly to her own room, where she quietly settled herself to her embroidery. "It is such a comfort to have Theodore interested in these little household matters," she murmured contentedly.

"It is an education for the children, too," she meditated as she listened to them running up and down stairs to bring their father first one thing and then another and heard his voice from above instructing them to start all the faucets running in the bathroom and to bring him a pail and two or three sponges.

In the course of five minutes her youngest son appeared at her elbow. "What is it, Johnnie?" she questioned.

"Father wants his other pair of glasses," he announced; "he's just smashed his best ones."

"What, those beautiful new pebbles!" Mrs. Hurd cried regretfully. "How did it happen?"

"Oh, he was just looking down into the tank, and they dropped off and struck on a piece of lead pipe," Johnnie answered, skipping gayly away with the other pair of glasses. To him these little casualties added greatly to the enjoyment of the occasion.

In a short space of time a rap at Mrs. Hurd's door caused her to look up from her work. In the doorway stood the cook, apparently much agitated. "Oh, mum," she gasped breathlessly, "somethin's a leakin. Will yez come down to the kitchen? Sure an the ceilin's all wet an drippin down on me."

Mrs. Hurd sprang up. "They must have let the bathtub overflow," she exclaimed. "Come, we must all turn to with mops, cloths and all the sponges we can get hold of."

"I suppose you know, Theodore, that you have flooded the house," she called up stairs, adding, "quick, Johnny, bring me down all those sponges this very minute."

As Johnny came leisurely down stairs with the necessary sponges, he remarked gleefully: "Pa couldn't clean it out much of any, after all. He says that no one but the plumber can get at it." At this point, having reached his mother's side, he whispered, "He's broken his other glasses, too, but he said we needn't say anything to you about it."

A little later in the morning, when the household had once more resumed its usual atmosphere of tranquillity, Mr. Hurd entered the sitting room, with an air of quiet determination. "I am going to adjust that new gas burner that I bought so long ago," he remarked, displaying it.

"Oh, Theodore, don't you think you had better leave it till the gas man comes?" his wife remonstrated.

"Nonsense," he responded. "I should hope that I could screw on a simple fixture like that. Boys," he added, "just run down cellar and bring me up the tallest steps, and then ask Jane if she knows where that monkey wrench was put."

Mrs. Hurd withdrew once more to the seclusion of her own apartments, after a timid protest regarding the danger of allowing the gas to escape too freely. She embroidered peacefully for a few moments and was beginning to congratulate herself that all was well, when a dull thud, accompanied by a crash, caused her to spring to her feet.

"Oh, what has happened?" she called out in agonized tones. "Are you killed, Theodore?"

Mrs. Hurd rushed frantically down stairs in time to catch sight of her husband picking himself up from the floor, where he had apparently been seated amid shattered fragments of several glass globes which had accompanied his sudden descent, while the voices of the children questioned anxiously, "Have you hurt yourself, papa?"

Before his family could ascertain how badly he had been injured, he rose majestically, swelling with righteous indignation, and even refusing to allow Mrs. Hurd to examine the cut on his left wrist, which was bleeding freely from too close a contact with one of the defunct gas globes.

"It is shameful to keep a pair of steps like that in the cellar of any respectable house," he thundered, crunching the broken glass under foot. "They are only fit for kindling wood! They should have been chopped up long ago, long ago! I never in my life saw such a shiftless set of people. Nobody takes a bit of interest in anything about the house, but everything is left for me to attend to, and I—I have nothing more important to do than to spend my time regulating the contents of the attic and the cellar. And now look at that!" And he pointed upward to the half adjusted gas fixture. Mrs. Hurd turned her eyes in that direction and allowed them to rest regretfully on the chandelier, which was bent far out from its usual position and no longer hung at right angles from the ceiling.

"Never mind that, Theodore," she said consolingly. "I'm thankful that it broke your fall. We shall have to get the gas man here to fix it, and he can finish adjusting the new burner at the same time. So please say you won't attempt to do anything more to it just now, won't you, Theodore?" And Mr. Hurd said he wouldn't.

After luncheon, Mrs. Hurd urged that it would be a good chance for them to make a long talked of call on their new neighbors across the way.

"I've been waiting for you to go with me, Theodore," she ventured persuasively, but he shook his head and insisted that he didn't feel like making calls.

"Then I will run over without you," she said resignedly, thinking that he might be feeling somewhat lame after his fall from "the tallest steps."

"I shan't be gone long," she said pleasantly, looking into the library, where her husband was settled comfortably with his pipe and one of the magazines. "Why don't you take a nap while I'm gone?" she suggested, pausing with her hand on the front door knob. Then she went cheerfully on her way.

When Mrs. Hurd returned, three-quarters of an hour later, a strong odor of paint greeted her nostrils, mingled with another unmistakably like benzine. "Johnny," she inquired of her youngest boy, who was buried in a book in a distant corner of the library, "where is your father?"

"Oh, he's up stairs painting the back entry," he responded. "I was helping him, but I got some paint on me, and he sent me down here."

"On you," his mother exclaimed, scrutinizing him hastily, "say, rather, all over your lovely new suit Oh, Johnny, how could you be so careless!"

Mrs. Hurd hurried up stairs, guided by an increasing odor of paint, which plainly bespoke the continuance of Mr. Hurd's good resolutions. As she opened the door into the back entry her husband's voice called to her to "look out for paint. I've painted the door on both sides," he concluded, but this warning came too late, for already her velvet cape had swept against the newly coated surface.

This was more than flesh and blood could withstand, and Mrs. Hurd's pent up indignation burst forth.

"I should think that you had done enough harm for one day, Theodore," she exclaimed reproachfully; "my best cape is entirely ruined, and you know it isn't paid for yet! I meant to have told you that the bill for it came in only yesterday."

"Go back, don't come out here, my dear," Mr. Hurd cried excitedly. "We've just met with an accident. They will happen in the best regulated families, you know." Here his voice took on a more persuasive tone as he cast a hurried look at his wife, who stood like some avenging spirit in the doorway, and then he stooped down and continued to rub the carpet energetically with a roll of cloth which he held in one hand.

"Have you decided to paint the entry carpet with a whole roll of my emergency bandages, Theodore?" Mrs. Hurd said coldly. "I thought you had bought yourself a new brush for that purpose." Then she relented slightly at sight of his dejected countenance as he knelt upon the floor. "What was the catastrophe this time?" she questioned mournfully.

"I was opening that largest pot of paint, and very excellent paint it is, too," he responded volubly, "when Johnny knocked my elbow, wholly by accident, my dear, and sent the contents all over the floor. So we have had rather bad work here with it, but it's pretty much all up now," he announced, with an effort at great cheerfulness, as he gave a final rub with the emergency bandage.

"After all, this carpet is about worn out," Mr. Hurd went on, "so a little paint on it doesn't matter. Moreover, I told the boys that they might as well begin to take it right up, and I would see about getting a new one tomorrow. They're workers, I can tell you! Why, they have taken out all the tacks already—and, by the way, Johnny stepped on one and ran it into his foot, and I told him that he had better let you look at the place to see if there was any danger of his having lockjaw or anything of that sort."

"I will go and bathe his foot in hot water at once," she replied, turning to depart. Then she paused and looked across the back entry at her husband, who stood confronting her in his shirt sleeves. "May I ask why the stopper is out of that bottle of benzine?" she queried.

"Oh," he answered meekly, putting in the cork, "I got a little paint on my own coat, and I thought that benzine would take it off I've heard you say that it was the best thing"—

Mrs. Hurd lifted her skirts gingerly and stepped across the entry carpet. "I will take your coat and get off the paint, Theodore," she said reassuringly, "if you will promise me one thing. Promise me that you will under no circumstances help any more about the house."

"Very well," he assented, "then I won't melt up any of that glue I brought home to mend the chairs with."

"No, no, indeed," she protested earnestly. "If you have any love for me, Theodore, say that you will do nothing of the sort. It is all very well for ordinary men—men who haven't your talents and ability—to do such things, but with you it is quite different. You are capable of something better. Spend your holidays anyway you like. Go to the club, go fishing, eat, smoke, play billiards, but give me your word that whatever happens you will never be helpful about the house again!"

And with his hand upon the benzine bottle Mr. Hurd took a solemn oath that he never would.—Caroline Ticknor in Boston Transcript.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

Efforts Being Made to Erect One in Sonoma Valley.

ED. INDEX-TRIBUNE:

The announcement in last week's INDEX-TRIBUNE that the Episcopalians in this valley now see their way towards the erection of a permanent church must be a source of great gratification to all. The fact that our brethren of the various denominations possess buildings erected for the worship of God, while we Episcopalians have none such, has been a silent reproach these long years. An effort was indeed made some eight years ago to collect contributions and, we believe, a certain amount of money and more promises hold good to the present time. But for some reason or another the effort died an untimely death. Do not let us have to write an epitaph for the present effort immediately after singing pæans of satisfaction over its birth. Let us look matters squarely in the face before we start working. This has the warrant of common sense and of scripture. There is something more needed than the mere sum that the building itself would cost. True, through the kindness of friends, two sites for a church have been definitely promised. With one of these sites building stone has also been donated. Thus the first expense—that of a building site—has been swept away through these generous offers, but there is a further question to be faced. There is the necessary stipend to be provided for the man appointed to the work. The old saying "a man must live" is true of every individual in every grade of society. As the church will have no endowment this provision will call for a constant effort on the part of every individual worshiping in the church. Then, too, a certain sum must be provided for the unavoidable wear and tear. All this must be considered, but it should serve not to dampen the ardor of any, but rather to spur all on to greater and more earnest efforts. Our brethren in other branches of the church have had precisely the same difficulties to encounter and have overcome them. Why should not we? As I write this I am given to understand that a clergyman who has come on a visit to the valley has been given the Bishop's sanction to commence work immediately.

Apologizing for the length of my letter and thanking you in anticipation for its insertion, believe me to be an

EPISCOPALIAN.

THE issuance of postal notes by the United States Government is soon to be discontinued. Their abolishment will be a matter of general regret with the public for the little orders have been a source of much convenience in the transmission of small sums of money. The Government, says the Examiner, has had the change in view for some time. A committee was appointed by act of Congress some time ago to investigate and simplify department methods. While no official notification has yet been received it is understood that the discontinuance of the useful postal note has been recommended and will be carried into effect. The fee for money orders under $5 will be reduced to the present postal note fee, and it is the intention to have the former take the place of the latter. The chief inconvenience of the change will come from the fact that identification is required on money orders, but as the department is not very particular with small orders it is thought that the trouble over identification will not be serious. The change will take place June 30th.

It must be a good article that will induce a man to go forty miles to get it. Mr. E. R. Swetnam of Fairfax Station, Va., says a party came forty miles to his store for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and bought a dozen bottles. "The remedy is a great favorite in this vicinity," he says "and has performed some wonderful cures here." It is intended especially for Coughs, Colds, Croup and Whooping Cough. For sale by all dealers.

A SPLENDID AFFAIR.

Mrs. Rodger's Big Concert at the Opera House Last Tuesday Evening.

From the Petaluma Imprint.

Our music loving people expected a big treat for last evening, in fact they had long been looking forward for this event, and to say that they were not disappointed is putting the matter too mildly, for every person in the huge audience was delighted with the evening's entertainment and each performer was given an ovation, the applause in each instance being tumultous.

The male quartette consisting of Messrs. Ayers, Woodward, Pedigo and Winfield received the honors usually bestowed upon these splendid singers.

Miss Pearl Scudder's banjo solo delighted the audience and it was splendidly executed.

Misses Josephine and Edith Brown, two of our sweet-voiced songstresses, sang as they always do, while Harry F. Smith, our own violin virtuoso, played in his usual faultless style.

Mr. Daniel M. Warde has a rich baritone voice of unusual sweetness and compass and his hearers were delighted, while Miss Amelia Ferrer, the popular guitar artist, and Will H. Fairbanks, who handles the mandolin exquisitely, charmed the audience with their beautiful solos and duets.

Of Prof. E. L. Lippitt's faultless playing nothing need be said. He rendered a solo, "Hungarian Rhapsodie," No. 12, by Liszt, in his own artistic, peerless manner, and while he played the audience sat as if spellbound. The professor was forced to respond to an encore.

Little Miss Julie Granice, daughter of Editor Granice of Sonoma, made her first appearance in this city, and her exquisite singing created a genuine sensation. Although but a mere child, her singing is simply wonderful, and her sweet, rich contralto voice shows excellent culture, while her execution is finished and her stage presence is natural and graceful. The young lady has a brilliant future before her, and some day Sonoma county will be proud indeed of its wonderful little songstress. It is hoped that she will appear in Petaluma again in the near future.

From the Petaluma Courier.

The concert given at the theater last Tuesday evening in Petaluma under the management of Mrs. J. P. Rodgers, for the benefit of St. John's Church, drew a large and thoroughly appreciative audience. The concert was one of the most successful affairs of the kind ever given in Petaluma. Of the talent from abroad it must be said that Mrs. Rodgers displayed rare judgment in her selections. The contralto, little Miss Julie Granice of Sonoma, is an artist. She amazed the audience with her finished execution. Her singing, considering the fact that she is a mere child, is simply marvelous.

MC. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.,

"Last March I had to give up work, 'completely worn out.' I felt tired all the time; had frequent headaches, and spells of dizziness; I had no appetite, and what little I did eat, distressed me terribly. My wife was feeling about the same. I went to the drug store, and called for Hood's Sarsaparilla. The druggist said he was out of Hood's, but that he could give me a medicine made from about the same formula,

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

just as good. I bought a bottle and carried it home, and wife and I took it faithfully. That bottle was finished and we could see no improvement. A second and then a third bottle followed, when my wife declared she would take it no longer, as she believed she felt worse than she did before taking it. We put the third bottle away half full; and I went to the drug-store and got a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and a box of Hood's Pills. In less than a week

We Began to Improve,

We began to relish our food, and it didn't distress us as before. That tired worn-out feeling left us gradually, and after taking five bottles, we called ourselves well; and give Hood's Sarsaparilla the credit it deserves. Whenever I take a severe cold I always take three of Hood's Pills at night, and in the morning find my cold broken. Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills are a complete medicine chest in themselves, and I heartily recommend them to everyone."

To my friends and the public in general who recently nominated me for City Trustee at the coming election, I will say not to cast any votes for me, as I will not serve if elected for reasons best known to myself. The nomination was made contrary to my expressed wishes. Thanking my friends for their sincere effort to see me in office again I trust they will excuse my refusal, as I have already served ten years as a Trustee of the City of Sonoma.

TRUSTWORTHY STATEMENTS.

A recent New York dispatch reads:

"Jam s C. H——, a fine looking and apparently healthy man, was observed to stagger while walking on Fifth Avenue this afternoon, and after taking one or two uncertain steps fell to the sidewalk. When picked up he was dead. A physician examined the body and pronounced heart disease the cause of death. A peculiarly sad feature of the case is that Mr. H—— was on his way to Maine, to settle in the home of his boyhood. He had passed the previous ten years in the western mining country, and had amassed a fortune. If YOU have any of the symptoms given in the following testimonials you should lose no time in seeking relief.

From John L. Roberts, Slatington, Pa.: "I have suffered with palpitation, irregular pulse, fainting and smothering spells, pain in shoulders, side, and arms for over forty years. For twelve years have been treated without avail by prominent physicians in my neighborhood and in New York. Growing constantly worse, smothering spells followed one another, so my life was often in danger and I needed constant care. As my son had been cured by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, he sent me three bottles. The first dose gave me instant relief. Before using the last bottle I was completely cured. Although seventy-five years old I feel twenty years younger. I claim my cure to be almost a miracle."

Here is a letter from Mrs John Kelges, of Cleveland, O.: "I had been troubled with my heart and stomach for years, but for sixteen months had been confined to my bed. I had four of the best doctors in the city, but none of them could benefit the weakness of my heart. I also had dropsy and rheumatism. I never took medicine that relieved me at once as Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure does. I am much stronger. My appetite is splendid. I gain strength with every dose. I have gained more in six weeks from your treatment than in sixteen months from all the doctors."

"Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists. It is safe, effective, agreeable, and does cure." Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

The Captain's friends in this valley are legion and he was cordially welcomed to his old home by almost every body. Mrs. George Riddell (nee Bessie Tilden) lost a purse while on her way from San Francisco to Schellville via Tiburon on Saturday evening last. I am all right to-day and would insist on every one who is afflicted with that terrible disease to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm and get well at once." 50 cent bottles for sale by all dealers.

DROPPED DEAD.

C. W. Engelbert a Victim of Heart Disease.

What the Inquest Developed—Funeral of Deceased Largely Attended.

Sonoma was startled last Saturday morning by the announcement of the sudden death of C. W. Engelbert, the well-known butcher, in Los Gatos, whither he had went to take the Keeley cure. He left Sonoma the previous Thursday apparently in the very best of health and his sudden death was a great shock to his devoted wife, who had done everything in her power the past few years to ween him from his only fault—the liquor habit—but without success.

Among his boon companions Charley Engelbert was a hale fellow well met, and he had many friends in this town and valley. He was a member and ex-Chief of the Sonoma Volunteer Fire Department, under whose auspices his funeral took place last Monday. The funeral cortage was headed by the Sonoma Valley Band. Then came the members of the Fire Company drawing the engine, hook and ladder truck and hose cart, which were appropriately and tastefully draped in mourning. Following was the hearse and pallbearers, the deceased's faithful saddle horse draped in mourning and a long line of vehicles of every description.

The remains were temporarily placed in the public receiving vault in Mountain Cemetery.

The following dispatch from Los Gatos gives an account of the deceased's sudden taking off and the result of the Coroner's inquest:

LOS GATOS, March 24th.—About twenty minutes past 8 o'clock this morning and without a moment's warning Charles W. Engelbert of Sonoma, who arrived in Los Gatos last evening to take the Keeley cure for the liquor habit, dropped dead from heart disease on the steps of the Los Gatos Hotel while talking to a guest of the house. Engelbert was assigned to a room in the hotel upon his arrival, and spent the time from then until his sudden death in the manner of other transient guests. Engelbert retired about 10 o'clock last night and arose about 7 this morning, sat down at the office desk, wrote an affectionate letter to his wife and posted it, and then went to the Keeley Institute to arrange about treatment.

Finding no one there, as it was before treatment time, Engelbert returned to the hotel and mounting the front porch stood talking to a guest for a few moments, remarking that business men slept late in Los Gatos; that if he was to do the same his business would soon be bankrupt for want of attention.

Suddenly Engelbert tottered backward, at the same time throwing forward his hands as if for help, half turned and fell to the piazza floor. The hotel porter and several guests who were inside rushed out and carried Engelbert into a room on the ground floor where he was laid on a bed and messengers dispatched in every direction for a physician. In the meantime Engelbert gave one or two short, quick gasps, and then to all intents and purposes lay as one dead. Dr. Knowles was soon on the scene, and after an examination pronounced Engelbert beyond all earthly help. Coroner Secord of San Jose was notified by telephone and arrived on the first train. A jury consisting of the following citizens was empanneled: Frank Cushing, Sr., A. R. White, James Taylor, A. B. Blank, William Blank, E. F. Smith, J. H Stoddard and S. H. Mudge. The inquest was held at 1 o'clock. The following facts were then developed: Engelbert, whose place of business and residence was in the town of Sonoma, was a member of the firm of Engelbert & Hartin, butchers; was thirty-seven years of age, married, and from papers found in his pocket-book had been separated from his wife, the articles of separation showing the date of March 17th, 1894. In the above paper was found a statement about certain divisions of property, etc. In a bank-book of the San Francisco Savings Union the sum of $1,033.99 was found to be placed to the credit of Engelbert. A traveling card issued by the Order of Hermann Sons and bearing the date of March 13th, 1894, certified that Engelbert was a member in good standing of a San Francisco order of that society and entitled to sick benefits and in case of death to $250 to defray cost of burial. In a handsome purse found in one of the dead man's pockets was found $60 in gold, $1.50 in silver and a twenty-dollar greenback. An autopsy was performed by Dr. Knowles, who testified the result of Engelbert's death to be paralysis of the heart, produced by the enlargement of the left ventricle, which was found to be one-fifth larger than the ordinary size. The doctor stated that the trouble was in all probability caused by over-indulgence in stimulants.

The jury rendered a verdict that the deceased came to his death by paralysis of the heart. Immediately after Engelbert's death a telegraphic message was sent to his widow in Sonoma, and an answer received to prepare the remains for shipment and send the body to her. Engelbert was a good-looking, well-dressed German, strongly built and showing scarcely any marks of dissipation in his general appearance. Evidently it was his intention to take the cure in order to effect a reconciliation with his wife."

The deceased left a will in which he bequeaths his entire property to his wife.

CITY ELECTION.

The Candidates for the Various Offices.

The election for city officers which takes place on Monday, April 9th, promises to be a spirited one. There are seven candidates on the ticket for City Trustees, to wit: V. Bulotti, N. R. Knight, John Ludeman, J. E. Poppe, Wm. Trudgen, Henry Weyl and Ed. Wegner. The latter announces in these columns that he does not want the office and if elected will not serve. For Treasurer Geo. H. H. Cornelius has no competitor neither has Judge Breitenbach for City Clerk and Assessor. For Marshal there are four candidates in the field as follows: J. H. Albertson, Eugene Robin, Ed. Gillan and John Wagnon.

For the most part all the candidates are competent to fill the various positions of trust to which they aspire.

Easter Services.

At St. Francis' church a very large congregation assembled on Easter Sunday. High Mass was celebrated at 10:30 A. M. by Rev. Father Whyte. The altars were beautifully decorated with St. Joseph's, china and calla lilies, trailing vines and pretty white flowers. A volunteer choir made up of some of the best soloists in Sonoma rendered beautiful vocal music.

The services at the Congregational church were appropriate to the day. Rev. C. E. Chase presided at the morning service and preached a good sermon. The singing by the choir was exceptionally good. The church was handsomely decorated with calla lilies, white flowers and ferns and the pulpit was tastefully trimmed with feathery green sprays. This prominent edifice was well filled with devout members and friends of the church.

The Easter morning services at the Methodist Church were conducted by the Pastor, Rev. G. R. Stanley. The sermon preached was appropriate to the occasion. This church was also beautifully decorated with lilies and rich flowers and gracefully arranged vines. The music was well rendered and was listened to with much pleasure by the congregation.

Growing Weather.

The warm, genial weather of the past week has been greatly beneficial to growing crops of all kinds. Hay, grain and pasturage in Sonoma Valley has taken a good start and a heavy yield is assured. Fruit trees of every description are budding out and the orchards are in full bloom. An exceptionally fine fruit crop will be raised in this valley and in view of the reported failure of the Eastern and Western fruit crop there will no doubt be a good market for all kinds of California fruit this season.

Frank Gilbert Again Victorious.

The four-round boxing contest which came off in the Olympic Club rooms, San Francisco, last Monday night, between Frank Gilbert, a Sonoma boy, and J. A. McGinley of Australia, both members of the Olympic Club, resulted in a victory for Gilbert, who made an aggressive fight from start to finish. Frank Gilbert, who is the champion light weight boxer of the Pacific Coast, has never been defeated.

Opening of Glen Ellen Park.

The opening of Glen Ellen Park for the season will be inaugurated with a grand ball on the park grounds on Friday evening, April 13th. Messrs. Troll & Elliott, the lessees of the Park, extend a cordial invitation to the people of Sonoma county to be present. The admission will be free. The affair will be conducted in a first-class and orderly manner. See adv. in an other column.

She says this is truly the country for flowers, birds and sunshine.

Wise precautions and proper personal care will do more to banish wrinkles than all the creams and lotions in the world. Given the cause, which is always worry and fatigue, a woman should do her best to avoid them. Wrinkles come like the creases in a carelessly folded garment. The first or second time the wrinkles are made they shake out, but oft repeated they can't be ironed into lasting smoothness. Frowns bring wrinkles, and the often-knotted muscles, like thread that has once been crocheted, refuses to straighten out after a time.

Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Spaulding came up from their home in San Francisco last Saturday. Mrs. Spaulding will remain in Sonoma a couple of weeks where she hopes to regain her health. She has been quite ill from a recent attack of la grippe.

"I'm going to get married," said he as he placed a hand as large as a Dutch cheese upon the counter," "and I want a wedding cake." "It is customary nowadays," said the pretty bakery girl, "to have the materials of the cake harmonize with the calling of the bridegroom. For a musician, now, we have an oat cake; for a man who has no calling and lives upon his friends, a sponge cake; for a newspaper paragrapher, spice cake, and so on. What is your calling, please?" "I'm a pugilist." "Then you'll want a pound cake."

Leonard Everett Perkins, the infant son of R. E. Perkins, died at the home of his grand-parents last Wednesday of brain fever. Since the death of little Leonard's young mother nearly a year ago he has been tenderly nursed and cared for by his devoted grand-mother and aunts. This baby was a beautiful child and was the pride and joy of his fond father, who will now greatly miss his baby boy. The remains were tenderly laid away last Thursday in Mountain Cemetery where the birds will sweetly sing and the flowers bloom over his little grave.

If you ever have a sick headache and want it cured quickly and effectively with none of the debilitating effects of drugs, just get a tablespoonful of red pepper, mix it with vinegar to a thick paste and spread on a cloth, cotton or linen, bind upon the forehead with a handkerchief from temple to temple, and take about two grains of red pepper in a teaspoonful of vinegar and swallow it. The mixture on the forehead will burn, but will not blister, and in the course of ten minutes the headache will disappear under the stimulating effects of this remedy, leaving the patient feeling as if such distressing things as sick headaches were unknown to the human family.

REMINGTON.

Glen Ellen, March 29, 1894.

Death of a Sonoma Boy.

Jos. M. Gilbert died at the home of his parents in San Francisco, last Thursday morning at 2 o'clock, after a long illness. Deceased was the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Gilbert, and was born in this city thirteen years ago. Notice of funeral, which takes place to-morrow in San Francisco, will be found in another column.

Another Runaway.

The month of March is always prolific of runaway accidents. Already there has been recorded at least half a dozen in this vicinity within the past three weeks, and in one instance one horse was instantly killed and another maimed for life. On Tuesday last there was another disastrous runaway. A horse belonging to F. Duhring, while being harnessed, broke loose from its driver and dashed down Napa street at a furious rate. Just as he reached the Bates residence by some means or another he made a mis-step and fell to the ground, breaking his left fore leg at the knee joint. The animal, which was valued at $150, was shot to put him out of his misery.

"The people of this vicinity insist on having Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and do not want any other," says John V. Bishop of Portland Mills, Indiana. That is right. They know it to be superior to any other for colds, and as a preventive and cure for croup, and why should they not insist on having it. 50 cent bottles for sale by all dealers.

SONOMA INDEX - TRIBUNE.

SONOMA, SATURDAY, MARCH 31, 1894

THE OLD CLAY PIPE.

There's a lot of solid comfort
In an old clay pipe, I find,
If you're kind of out of humor
Or in trouble in your mind.
When you're feeling awful lonesome,
And don't know just what to do,
There's a heap of satisfaction
If you smoke a pipe or two.

The ten thousand pleasant memories
That are buried in your soul
Are playing hide and seek with you
Around that smoking bowl.
These are mighty restful moments;
You're at peace with all the world,
And the panorama changes
As the thin blue smoke is curled.

Now you cross the bridge of sorrows,
Now you enter pleasant lands,
And before an open doorway
You will linger to shake hands
With a lithe and girlish figure
That is coming through the door.
Ah, you recognize the features!
You have seen that face before.

You are at the dear old homestead
Where you spent those happy years;
You are romping with the children;
You are smiling through your tears;
You have fought and whipped the bully;
You are eight, and he is ten.
Oh, how rapidly we travel!
You are now a boy again.

You approach the open doorway,
And before the old armchair
You will stop and kiss the grandma;
You will smooth the thin white hair;
You will read the open Bible,
For the lamp is lit, you see.
It is now your hour for bedtime,
And you kneel at mother's knee.

Still you linger at the hearthstone;
You are loath to leave the place,
When an apple cut's in progress;
You must wait and dance with Grace.
What's the matter with the music?
Only this: The pipe is broke,
And the thousand pleasant fancies
Vanish promptly with the smoke.
—A. B. Van Fleet in New York Sun.

Packing.

The subject of packing is one which comes home to everybody. Consequently Lord Kelvin's lecture to the Royal society on the way the universe ought to be packed is of universal interest. In his paper on "Homogeneous Partition of Space," Lord Kelvin, as I read, proved, by skillful divisions of rhomboidal and parallelopipedal bodies, that the best way is in tetrakaidekahedronal cells. Fortunately that is just the way in which the universe is packed. It would be such a nuisance to have a lot of odd pentekaidekahodronal cells littering around, with chunks of the sky tumbling about and bits of limbs protruding into the middle of next week. The traveling public will be grateful to the polygonal president for his hint, which clearly has a practical application, for what is good enough for the cosmos is good enough for a Gladstone bag.—Pall Mall Budget.

Physicians' Bugaboos.

Most fashionable physicians have a specialty remedy, or bugaboo, which they advocate or inveigle against perpetually. Sir Andrew Clark led a crusade against tea; a New York physician is as fierce against coffee, attributing to it the aggravation of every ill, from croup to gout. A well known London doctor always ordered hot water with claret, another was fond of prescribing the hot water without the claret, and so on. Still another eminent medical authority asserts that getting up early tends to exhaust the physical power and to shorten life, while the so called in vigorating early hours are apt to produce lassitude and are positively dangerous to some constitutions.—New York Times.

What, Indeed?

Mr. Grimme—It is just an outrage the way the little innocent birds are being butchered to adorn women's hats.

Mrs. Grimme—But, my dear, don't you remember that it was the bright bird wing I wore on my hat as I was going along the street that attracted your attention and led to your marrying me?

Mr. Grimme—What in thunder has that got to do with it? That only makes the case stronger.—Indianapolis Journal.

The Truthful Camera.

The Engineer observes that a camera is supposed to be a machine that will not lie, but from some points of view, especially the perspective, it stretches truth till it cracks some. A view of an engine from the back cylinder head makes it look about 600 feet long, while a drawing room car photographed from the door looks like a railway tunnel.

The title president occurs in the Bible. "It pleased Darius to set over the kingdom 120 princes, which should be over the whole kingdom, and over these three presidents, of whom Daniel was first, that the princes might give accounts unto them, and the king should have no damage."—Daniel vi, 1-2.

The word pharaoh was not, strictly speaking, a name of an individual, but of a class or race. For ages all the Egyptian kings called themselves pharaohs, just as the Roman emperors were each styled Augustus.

We should be better acquainted with many things if we inspected them from the proper standpoint. We should remember that objects, to be seen well, require to be viewed at an angle of 45 degrees.

The Ship of the Desert Under Full Sail.

It was almost a relief to turn from these fantastic and semijocular trials of speed and skill to the straightforward and almost appalling simplicity of the camel race. No one who has not seen the "ship of the desert" under a press of sail, so to speak, can have any idea of the number of knots an hour which it can make, while as to picturing to the imagination the appearance of a fully "extended" camel the feat may be pronounced impossible. The finish in this race was magnificent.

Three camels flew along neck and neck—and such necks!—for full a hundred yards to within a few lengths of the post, their ungainly heads erect, their splay, disjointed legs opening and shutting at each stride like a dozen jackknives worked by machinery and their riders literally waving fore and aft with the violence of the motion as if a giant was about to hurl them from a sling. How they held on nobody could see, and Allah, the merciful, the compassionate, alone knew. Some knelt, grasping the brute's retorted neck, some sat or crouched on the saddle seat, some frankly extended themselves almost at full length on the animal's mountainous dorsal ridge and clung to the hump as a shipwrecked sailor to a rock. It was a sight to haunt the waking memory and to ride the dyspeptic dreams.—London Telegraph.

The Squirrel Monkey.

The red backed tectee, or squirrel monkey, is by far the most beautiful in form and color of all the North American monkeys as well as being an interesting pet in captivity. The length of the head and body is about 12 inches, and the tail is about the same length. In color the whole skull cap is black. The ears, face, neck and throat are white. The back is reddish brown. The sides of the body, forearms, hands and feet are ocher yellow, and the arms, thighs and upper two-thirds of the tail are olive and gray. The tail is not prehensile, and the outer third of it is covered with rather bushy black hair, longest at the end.

I once owned a very near relative to the species described above—a teetee, but not this identical species—which was about the size of a gray squirrel, with the nervous activity and sprightliness of three. I bought it of a sleepy Indian in South America, and it proved to be the plague of several people's lives.

One that we shot and roasted for supper proved to better flavored than any squirrel I ever ate. These monkeys are so small they are not swift climbers in the tree tops, and although easy enough to shoot are desperately hard to find afterward.—William T. Hornaday in St. Nicholas.

Seeing Distances.

About 200 miles in every direction is the distance a man can see when standing on a clear day on the peak of the highest mountain—say at a height of 26,668 feet, or a little over five miles above the level of the sea. An observer must be at a height of 6,667 feet above sea level to see objects at a distance of 100 miles. The distance in miles at which an object upon the surface of the earth is visible is equal to the square root of 1½ times the height of the observer in feet above sea level. Some allowance has to be made for the effect of atmospheric refraction, but as the refraction varies at different heights and is affected by the various states of the weather no precisely accurate figures for general purposes can be given. Probably from one fourteenth to one-tenth of the distance given by the formula would have to be deducted, owing to the refraction of the atmosphere.—Home Magazine.

How He Escaped.

They were speaking of peculiar names.

"I had a prisoner once," said a member of the party, who was formerly sheriff of the county, "who had the most peculiar name I ever heard. He was a dago and was registered on the jail docket as 'Xenophon Emerito Mercatoria Andrea.'"

"No wonder he got arrested; s'pose he dropped his name on the street one day and was hauled up for disturbing the peace," was the comment from the party. "How long was he in?" asked one.

"Less than a week. He broke out."

"How?"

"His initials did it."—Indianapolis Sentinel.

The Rhubarbs.

The fashion of naming private residences calls to mind the story told by Kirk Munroe of a witty woman who lived in an old fashioned, quiet New England town. She wrote a note in response to an invitation to tea, dated at "The Elms," or some such name, newly given by newcomers to the old homestead they had just acquired, and dated her reply from "The Rhubarbs." "For," as she said, "it would never do not to call our place by some distinctive name, and there's more rhubarb than anything else in our back yard."—Independent.

A Cautious Lover.

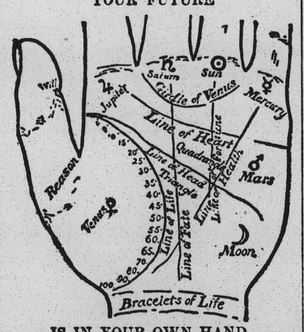
YOUR FUTURE



IS IN YOUR OWN HAND.

Palmistry assumes to tell what the lines in your hand indicate. It will amuse you, if nothing more. The above diagram almost explains itself. The length of the LINE OF LIFE indicates probable age to which you will live. Each BRACELET gives you thirty years. Well marked LINE OF HEAD denotes brain power; clear LINE OF FORTUNE, fame or riches. Both combined mean success in life; but you must keep up with modern ideas to win it. You will find plenty of these in Demorest's Family Magazine, so attractively presented that every member of the family is entertained. It is a dozen magazines in one. A CLEAR LINE OF HEART bespeaks tenderness; a straight LINE OF FATE, peaceful life; the reverse if crooked. A well defined LINE OF HEALTH spares you doctors' bills; so will the health hints in Demorest's. No other magazine publishes so many stories to interest the home circle. You will be subject to extremes of high spirits or despondency if you have the GIRDLE OF VENUS well marked; keep up your spirits by having Demorest's Magazine to read. By subscribing to it for 1894 you will receive a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides the superb premium picture, 17x22 inches, "I'm a Daisy!" which is almost a real baby, and equal to the original oil painting which cost $800; and you will have a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and perfect matter, that will keep you posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads, and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and you get with it, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2.00, and you will really get over $25.00 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send for a specimen copy. A large QUADRANGLE means honesty; a large TRIANGLE, generosity; long FIRST DIVISION OF THUMB, strong will; LONG SECOND DIVISION, reasoning faculty. The MOUNT OF JUPITER betokens ambition; that of SATURN, prudence; the SUN, love of splendor; MARS, courage; MOON, imagination; VENUS, love of pleasure; and MERCURY, intelligence. Take our advice as above and you will be sure to possess the last and most valuable quality.

Dear Sirs:—I have used your KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE for the last twelve years never being without it but a few weeks in that time and I have made several wonderful cures with it. I cured a Curb of long standing. Then I had a four year old colt badly Sweenied; I tried every thing without any benefit, so I tried your liniment, and in a few weeks he was well and his shoulder filled up all right, and the other, a four year old that had a Thoroughpin and Blood Spavin on the same joint, and to-day no one can tell which leg it was on. These statements can be proven, if necessary; the four year olds are now seven and can be seen any day at Cottage Grove, Or. S. Z. PAXTON.

Price $1.00 per bottle.
